

JIN Data Exchange (JINDEX)

After identifying the areas in which there was no meaningful difference between Microsoft and Sonic, we consolidated the number of factors to be considered into eleven categories. After everyone had a chance to review and comment on the weight assigned to each category, I sent a scorecard to the Technical Advisory Group (TAG) on Wednesday, to be returned by next week. I will announce the winner at the TAG design session on February 4th and in next week's JINfo, after which design begins in earnest.

Summary Offender Profile (SOP)

Templar is still working with AOC to validate that SOP is returning all relevant data from JIS. Unfortunately, moving the application data source from a development to production server at AOC produced a host of unintended and unforeseen consequences.

- The AOC database that is the source of data does not have appropriate indices on certain tables/fields, which means that SOP will not return records
- Connecting to the AOC server appears to have interrupted one of the Washington State Patrol parsers, and Templar has not been able to locate the source of the problem.

This means that Templar must roll back the code to what existed prior to modification. Additionally, because the project manager and technical lead are out next week, there is no hope of resolution anytime soon. This is a joke. Should I continue with plans to buy the source code?

On a brighter note, we are moving forward with setting up accounts for pilot users at DOC. If only there was something for them to connect to...

Electronic Citations

Representative Newhouse and Senators Delvin and Johnson signed on as sponsors of the draft legislation to abolish the requirement for signatures on citations. WACOPS and WASPC also expressed their support. Having a full complement of bipartisan sponsors, I dropped the bills today. The Senate version is 5627; the house bill has yet to have a number assigned.

I met with Dan Belles of WSP, Chris Madill of WTSC and Randy Mckown and Dirk Marler of AOC to discuss a proposed statement of work for the e-citations infrastructure and automation of the AOC? DOL exchange to the DIS legal department for incorporation into a Request for Proposals. I hope to validate this with my project steering committee and issue an RFP soon after the JINDEX platform is selected..
